

DUFFY'S SLAYER IS NOW UNDER ARREST, SAY AUTHORITIES

The Suspect is Paul Carlo, A Paroled Prisoner From Sing-Sing

WAS HIRED FOR THE JOB

Killed to Avert "Sensational Scandal," It Is Said

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 3.—(INS)—

Mickey Duffy's slayer has been arrested, S. Cameron Hinkle, assistant prosecutor of Atlantic City, asserted today. The suspect is Paul Carlo, alias "Dago Frank, the Killer," who was paroled from Sing Sing Prison a few weeks ago after serving a term for the murder of a Bronx butcher.

Carlo was hired by the racket king's trusted pals to kill their chief and was abetted by them to avert a "sensational scandal," according to Hinkle. The traitors, Hinkle declared are: Joe Beatty, Duffy's chauffeur, Samuel Grossman and Albert Skale, all of whom are being sought by the police of Philadelphia, Camden and seashore resorts on murder warrants. The trio left Duffy's door ajar during a friendly visit so when they left the killer could gain entrance to the racketeer's room and thus was able to fire the four fatal shots into Duffy's head while the gangster slept, Hinkle said.

The "sensational scandal" would have involved supposedly reputable business men in the large scale merchandise hi-jacking rackets resorted to by Duffy when his Camden brewery was raided a year ago, Hinkle indicated.

Carlo was trapped in a New York hideout along with his sweetheart, auburn-haired Vivian Lee, a cabaret singer. They were trailed there after two Philadelphia suspects were picked up at Toms River, N. J., with the baggage of the girl and her two children she had left behind in Atlantic City. Carlo also was named in a murder warrant as the "trigger man."

Further mystery was added to the Duffy murder today by the visit last night to the office of Capt. of Detectives James Malone here of the gangster's widow, Garbed in black and heavily veiled she conferred with Malone for some time.

Duffy was buried in the late afternoon at Mt. Moriah Cemetery and despite police protestations he got his last "big show." Fully 40,000 persons stormed the cemetery as the rites were concluded and swept 300 blue-coats aside and fought for the flowers around the open grave. They grasped whatever they could for souvenirs. Police used their clubs freely and at the command of Duffy's pals battered camera men in a futile effort to prevent any pictures being taken of the funeral or the mourners.

JAIL THREE MEN FOR HAVING BLACKBIRDS

LANGHORNE, Sept. 3.—Ten dollars a bird is what it cost two hunters who were found to have had blackbirds killed out of season, in their possession. These birds were alleged to have been shot along the banks of the Neshaminy Creek.

Arrested by Game Warden Edward W. Stucke, of 1221 East Cheltenham avenue, Philadelphia, the two men, Thomas Beattie, 103 West Lippincott street, Philadelphia, and Alexander Cassey, Newtown, were each fined $50 and $2 costs. Unable to pay the fines, the men were sent to the County Prison at Doylestown for 52 days.

Beattie and Cassey were alleged to have had five birds in their possession and both, it is said, refused to state who shot the birds. Because of this Justice of the Peace Frederick B. Tomlinson, Langhorne, who conducted the hearing, in default of the payment of the fines, sent both to the County Prison on a charge of having blackbirds in their possession when it was out of season.

A third member of the party, Charles Rudolph, also was given a sentence of 22 days in the County Prison for having failed to produce a hunter's license.

Heretofore it had been legal to shoot blackbirds on September 1, but recently a law was passed which made it illegal to shoot the birds before October 15.

Suspecting that a number of hunters might attempt to evade the new ruling, Warden Stucke yesterday kept a close watch along the Neshaminy Creek. He, it was said, found a number of persons in search of the birds, but he let them off with a warning. It is alleged that when Warden Stucke approached Rudolph, Beattie and Cassey regarding the matter, they became impudent and finding the birds in their possession, he arrested them and took them before Justice Tomlinson.

LATEST NEWS

DUFFY WAS NOT "BROKE"

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 3.—Reports that Mickey Duffy, slain racketeer, was "broke" when he was "put on the spot" in a hotel here Saturday, were dispelled today. A total of $11,000 in bills was found by hotel employees in the mattress of the bed upon which Duffy was shot, it was learned. About $1985 was found in the dead racketeer's pocket. Duffy's seven-carat diamond ring, however, is still missing.

LIGHTNING KILLS MAN

The dead man was Leonard Yerger, 22, Glasgow. He was killed almost instantly. ARREST PHILADELPHIA PHYSICIAN

Philadelphia, Sept. 3.—Dr. Harold G. Barrett, 34, was arrested in his Germantown home today charged with leaving the scene of two motor accidents in which a fellow physician was injured. Dr. Barrett first struck a milk wagon on Germantown avenue, police said. Fred Herzog, driver of the truck, however, was unhurt, but the physician sped away and two motorcycle policemen gave chase. A short time later the doctor's car skidded and overturned, and Dr. Wendell Boyer, an occupant, and another Germantown resident, were cut and bruised. Jumping from the overturned car, Dr. Barrett hailed a taxi-cab and fled again, police reported. He was found several hours later at his home.

MAIL PREMIUM LISTS FOR DOYLESTOWN FAIR

Materially Increase Prizes Offered For the Horse Show

FEW NEW REGULATIONS

Premium lists for the ninth annual Doylestown Fair have been mailed this week to exhibitors and prospective exhibitors throughout Bucks and the adjoining counties. A number of changes have been made in several departments.

In an effort to attract even better entries the premiums for the horse show, which will be held on Thursday and Friday, October 1st and 2nd, have been materially increased.

Entries in the cattle show have been limited to herds owned in Bucks County. The Bucks County Guernsey Breeders' Association and the Bucks County Holstein Breeders' Association are co-operating with the Fair and will put on the best cattle show ever held at Doylestown.

In the poultry department a new rule specifies that a breeding pen is now a "trio" instead of five birds. This important change will increase the quality and appearance of the show.

As in previous years entries in the majority of the departments close on Tuesday, September 22nd, a week before the Fair opens. Premium list and entry blanks may be secured by writing the Secretary, J. Allen Gardy, 28 W. State street, Doylestown, Pa.

ALLOW RED LIGHTS REAR, FRONT, FIRE APPARATUS

Change in Motor Code Makes Such Legal; On No Other Vehicle, Though

RULES ARE OUTLINED

Fire apparatus may legally display red lights both at the front and rear by virtue of a change in the Pennsylvania Vehicle Code. In many communities, the Keystone Automobile Club explains, firemen in recent years began to use red lights on the front of fire engines and fire patrol apparatus, as additional warning to the drivers of other vehicles. As there was no authority for such use under the law, the Department made a ruling against the practice. The Legislature accepted the opinion of firemen that the red lights were necessary, and the law now reads:

"No person shall operate or move any vehicle, except fire department and fire patrol apparatus, upon a highway with a red light displayed on the front thereof."

Fire apparatus likewise is exempt from the provision of the Code forbidding the use of compression or sparkling whistles. These, however, must be of a type approved by the Secretary of Revenue. Exception also is made in favor of fire apparatus in the matter of height, width and length.

As outlined in a previous article in this series, fire apparatus has the right of way while on official business, but this fact does not protect the driver of such vehicle from the consequences of reckless disregard of the rights of others.

Definite rules of procedure are laid down by the Code for motorists with respect to police and fire department vehicles:

1.—Upon approach of such vehicles, motorists shall immediately drive to a position as near as possible and parallel to the right-hand edge or curb of the highway, clear of any highway intersection, and shall remain in such position unless otherwise directed by a peace officer, until the police, fire department vehicle or ambulance shall have passed.

WIVES TELL COURT OF NON-SUPPORT AND POOR TREATMENT ACCORDED THEM BY THEIR HUSBANDS; COSTS PAID BY SOME

Most of the Court's Time is Taken Up in Hearing Cases of Marital Infelicity — Husbands Are Blamed in All the Cases Heard — Some Support Money is Renewed

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 3.—Stories of marital infelicity were conspicuous at a plead guilty session of the court. Divorces were granted and wives told their stories of non-support. In addition several pleaded guilty of various crimes and others applied for paroles. Theresa Pearson, 32, of Carversville, who charged her husband, Charles Pearson, with desertion and non-support, was granted the custody of her three children and $6 a week for their support.

According to the testimony of Mrs. Pearson she suffered almost indescribable deprivations and hardships. A friend of the family, Anthony Siran, twenty, of Carversville, testified that he knew the defendant to have assaulted his daughters while in a drunken stupor and that he did not provide for his family.

Several witnesses testified that Mrs. Pearson had a faultless character and that her reputation in the community has always been good, but that Mr. Pearson was degenerate and "inhuman."

The defendant, Pearson, admitted neglecting his family and said, "I work when I have something to do." His business was that of a butcher during the winter months.

Judge Keller imposing sentence on him required him to pay the costs of prosecution and pay his family six dollars a week.

Charging her husband with non-support Mrs. Ruth Gallagher, told Judge Keller that she and her two children, James, Jr., and Lorraine, had not been receiving their weekly allowances from James Gallagher, who is employed in a radio store in Trenton, N. J. The Court instructed him to maintain his payments of $7 a week and pay the costs of prosecution. The case was dismissed until Mrs. Gallagher should find it necessary to enter a new grievance against the defendant.

Failure to keep up his payments of the sum of $5 for the support of his daughter at the home of his mother-in-law in Quakertown, William Applebach, thirty-one, near Sellersville, was charged with non-support by his estranged wife, Gladys Applebach.

GASOLINE BOOTLEGGERS NO CHANCE HEREABOUTS

Highway Patrolmen Standing Guard at Entrance to Two Bridges

MANY SCHEMES TRIED

Gasoline bootleggers have little chance of getting their illegal product into Pennsylvania from New Jersey by crossing the bridges which span the Delaware River in this vicinity.

State highway motor patrolmen stand guard day and night at the various spans which connect the two states and the men are ever on the alert to detect any mysterious carriers.

The patrolmen are doing 24-hour guard duty at both the Burlington-Bristol bridge and also at the Trenton-Morrisville bridge.

The bootleggers are trying every imaginable scheme whereby they can get gasoline into Pennsylvania without first paying the state tax. This gives the vendors of such gasoline a price advantage of three cents and greatly aids in the retailing of the fuel.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred McLaughlin, of 1009 Pond street, entertained on Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Whitehead, of Haddonfield, N. J.

who testified that she was no longer able to support her own daughter.

The defendant testified that he had been a patient in the Quakertown Hospital, where he underwent treatment for kidney trouble, and that his physician had advised him to do only light work. He stated that his trade was carpentry, but that on account of the depression he was not able to get work. He had, it was testified, however, at different times sent his small daughter several dresses and shoes as gifts to compensate for the lack of money.

Mrs. Applebach, who was a former silk worker in Allentown, testified that on account of being a "striker" she was practically on "the black list" when it came to securing employment in another mill. She told how she had taken work by the day and that she was willing to become a domestic, but that it was impossible for her to support the child.

She refused to allow her daughter to accompany her husband and remain.

ALL EYES ON THE TREASURY

Impatiently awaiting the convening of the next Congress are minority moves to grant more millions to the farmers, more millions to the war veterans, more millions to the unemployed, more millions in subsidies. It will be a give-and-take session with the Federal Treasury doing the giving and every Tom-Dick-and-Harry minority group doing the taking.

Senator Moses, of New Hampshire, sounds this ominous warning: "The Senate probably will become more and more impressed by the effectiveness of the organized propaganda which exists so freely everywhere and is centered so conclusively in Washington."

Already the clans are gathering in Washington. All the old blocs, lobbies, minorities and interests and many new ones will be represented. Only one will be missing—the lobby, which alone among the thundering horde would represent a definite majority.

If there was ever a time when the electorate-at-large needed an organized lobby at Washington it is now. It will be called upon to dig down for all the money and therefore is entitled to a say in the spending. But the great majority will be silent and Congress will act upon the old axiom that "Silence gives consent."

Piracy lurks upon the American main. Many times will John Smith, taxpayer, surrender his gold and walk the plank of the treasury raiders. And where will his protectors—his representatives in Congress—be all this time? Down in Washington telling themselves that the pirates are the people.

THE COUNTY FAIR

These are county fair days in virtually every section of the United States and about the only Americans who will not attend a fair this fall are those most isolated of all provincials, the people who live in the half dozen largest cities and never get out of town.

The county fair informs the rural sections of progress in the outside world and mirrors their own development. It was the county fair which introduced the automobile to the farmer, which gave the farmer the first feel of farm machinery. Its balloon ascensions brought dreams of sky travel, to be realized later when "barnstorming" aviators, of whom Lindbergh was one, demonstrated the possibility of the airplane.

County fairs seldom entertain presidents, but they attract many Congressmen, governors and lesser officials, politicians and candidates, who, because the fair is a most democratic institution, are received on equal footing with the humblest citizens.

These useful agricultural expositions are, in many parts of the country, fighting for existence. Large as the attendance is, it diminishes each year. But where fairs close their gates, their passing always brings regret because they have become a part of some of the finest and richest of American traditions.

WAITING is WASTING

EVERY DAY you are without modern electric refrigeration in your home is another day of wasting... waste of costly perishables... waste of "left-overs" that need constant cold to keep them fresh.

THE MYSTERY OF GERALDINE

by ANTHONY ABBOT

COPYRIGHT BY COVIEL, FRIEDE, INC. — DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

The nude, hacked body of Geraldine Foster is found buried a short distance from the Peddler's Road house. The grave is filled with a pine-scented fluid, and nearby are two bottles similar to that found in the office of Dr. Humphrey Maskell, Geraldine's employer. Two women were seen leaving the doctor's office carrying similar bottles. Colt picks up a blond hair at the scene of the crime. Mr. Morgan, a neighbor, corroborates the doctor's statement that he was with her daughter the day of the disappearance. He claims a strange woman was waiting outside his office when he returned. Other suspects are Geraldine's brother, Bruce, who is to inherit her estate, and Harry Armstrong, the victim's former fiancé. Armstrong states he phoned Geraldine from Hartford, the night before she disappeared to suggest they elope, but she refused. Colt learns that Bruce Foster is an adopted child, whose father was hung for murder. It is believed, however, that Mr. Foster is the boy's real father. Mrs. Haberborn, owner of the Peddler's Road house, identifies Dr. Maskell as her tenant, "Mr. Digsbee." Maskell tells of receiving a phone call from Geraldine on January 5th, ten days after her disappearance, saying she was in trouble and requesting him to meet her. She failed to keep the appointment. The doctor denies taking her to Peddler's Road. An autopsy shows the girl had been dead ten days and her body preserved in tannic acid to make it appear she was dead only 48 hours. Dougherty accuses Maskell.

CHAPTER XXIII

BALANCING his weight from one foot to another, smiling, with his head turned to one side and his hands in his pockets, he related with strange and vital gusto:

"I am familiar with the confessions extorted by the French method—the Parisian third degree. In fact, I have seen innocent men, at the Paris Stryte, collapse in confusion in the room that is called the Chamber of Spontaneous Avowals. The spontaneity of the avowals is accelerated by beating the soles of the bare feet of the unfortunate suspects with long staves. That is called the bastinado. Very well. The New York equivalent is probably a flat on the jaw. Nevertheless, you will get nothing from me. I have an alibi. I did not kill Geraldine Foster."

"Alibi or no—just tell the truth. Mine," asked Thatcher Colt.

"And if I do that I will have nothing to fear?"—mockingly.

"Except just what you said—a seck in the jaw," said Hogan, who had endured this exchange of compliments as long as he could.

He seized the doctor by the arm. But the latter continued to address Thatcher Colt.

Victim of Circumstances

"I was called away from a minor operation to come down here," he explained. "I have a patient of mine, set the salted jaw of a surgeon and a cocktail, just after the operation, since lunch. Night I have a sandwich before Hogan and his friends begin to entertain me?"

"No," growled Hogan. "Stop lively. There's a gang waiting for you in a room downstairs, and it's been a long time since they had any exercise."

At the threshold, the doctor glanced back at the three of us.

"It's terrible, what can happen to a man through force of circumstances," he remarked. "However, I don't mind, Mr. Commissioner."

"We will see you before you have your breakfast," promised Thatcher Colt, his face inscrutable.

Then Hogan jogged the arm of his prisoner and led him hurriedly down an inner corridor.

"A hundred to one that fellow breaks before morning," said Dougherty.

But Thatcher Colt only smiled. Doctor Maskell was subjected to be ordered of a third degree that is still considered a classic in Headquarters.

A Bottle of Wits

He was not under arrest, although there was more than sufficient evidence to hold him under a short affidavit, or to jail him in the House of Detention as a material witness. No forcible persuasion was necessary; he willingly consented to the almost inhuman treatment to which he was now exposed. Of course, a man of Maskell's standing was in no danger of beating from the police. Nor by this do I mean to pretend that physical violence is no longer practiced. It is still practiced, although not as much as before. But such treatment is reserved for men who will respond to nothing else, who are themselves violent creatures intimidated by nothing except violent physical pain. Moreover, the results from such manhandling are no longer so effective in court. A prisoner roughly treated in the third degree can call his lawyer the next day, exhibit his bruises, have them photographed, and the pictures of the wounds will be shown at the trial to discredit his enforced revelations. The chief value lies in getting a confession that can be substantiated by confirming details subsequently checked up. With men of the stamp of Doctor Maskell, the police have more subtle methods; before the night was over Doctor Maskell was sure to wish that physical violence was all he had to face.

Hogan led the suspect downstairs to a brightly lighted office, where a battalion of questioners awaited him. The attack upon him began at once, launched by three of the most experienced men in the department. But the dark hours passed and a calm man, with ready answers, still faced the onslaught of hard and snarling investigators, grimly intent on a breakdown. At 3 A. M., when Thatcher Colt, Dougherty and joined them, they had got nowhere. They could not seem to break this man's iron nerve. Maskell had answered all their questions over and over again and not once had they tripped him. Often he smiled at them in his irritatingly superior manner. True, he was possessed of a higher degree of mentality than most of his questioners, but they had the strength of numbers, of reserve force, brutally marshalled against him. First, one detective would question him for fifteen minutes, then leave and another would begin, while the first checked up on any doubtful information the doctor had given him. During the night at least a dozen detectives from the Deputy Inspector down, huddled and harassed the man with trick questions. At 5 o'clock, when they gave Maskell a glass of milk and a sandwich, his story was still unbroken. It was one of the most desperate attempts to break down a denial in my experience in the department. Outside the door of the examination room two newspaper men had dragged a table from the Criminal Identification Bureau and sat there, playing "Seven-up" and making side bets on the result. When we led Doctor Maskell out of the office and took him to the washroom, one of the reporters remarked that the doctor appeared to be standing the ordeal of grilling much better than his tormentors. We took him back, and then the Commissioner again took charge.

First Thatcher Colt reasoned with him. Over and over again he took him through his story, but Maskell stuck to his single yarn without the slightest significant change, recounting the hours at which he had delivered the presents, his return to his office, the interview with the mysterious woman, his dinner later in a restaurant of the Fifth Avenue Hotel. At 6 o'clock in the morning, Doctor Maskell was still far from being a broken man. His energy was equal to Thatcher Colt's restless vitality. Finally, Dougherty stepped to the fore, whispered into the ear of Thatcher Colt, and the Commissioner nodded in skeptical acquiescence.

"Now, Doctor," proposed Dougherty, "I want you to come with me."

Thus it was that in the dark hours of that morning, Dougherty, followed by Colt and myself, motored Humphrey Maskell to the Morgue, at Bellevue Hospital, 26th St. and East River. He walked into the building like a man led into an ambush. There he was confronted with the body. At this dreadful sight, Doctor Maskell could not remain unmoved. He betrayed signs of nervousness and repulsion. But who could say they were indication of fear or guilt? Finally the police brought him back to the examination room, with no admission drawn from his stern lips. They were weary, all of them, with the night's inquisition, but secretly they marvelled at the strength, the energy, the undaunted vitality of their prisoner.

Undaunted Vitality

Meanwhile, detectives were checking up on all the stories that he told. It was at this time that Thatcher Colt, had a long and whispered conference with Merle Dougherty, and a messenger was dispatched to the building in which the doctor maintained his offices.

But Thatcher Colt was not ready to give up. He knew that when all seemed lost, victory might be within a hand's reach. Again, and still again, he made Doctor Maskell re-tell his story. He was resorting to the oldest and one of the most effective devices of the world—the trapping effect of repetition. Make the suspect tell the same story often enough, in wearying repetition, until he is sick of the very lies that he is telling, and eventually, often, I think by the sheer rebellion of the outraged subconscious, he lets fall some significant little detail which, seized upon and followed up, may break his story, altogether. That was what Thatcher Colt was hoping to do with Maskell. He tried to reach him from a different angle.

CARVER FAMILY HOLDS 20TH ANNUAL REUNION

Affair Takes Place at "Sunnyfield," Home of Horace and Alice Tomlinson

FIFTY-SIX WERE PRESENT

CHURCHVILLE, Sept. 3.—The 20th annual reunion of the Carver family was held Saturday at "Sunnyfield," the home of Horace and Alice Tomlinson. Owing to threatening weather and sickness in several families, the attendance was not up to normal, only 56 being present, but those present did full justice to the bounteous dinner served at 1 o'clock.

A short business meeting was held in the afternoon at which the same officers and chairmen of various committees were re-elected. Two deaths, two marriages and seven births were recorded for the past year.

A photographer was in attendance to take pictures of the family group of which Mrs. Mattie Hibbs, of Bethayres, was the oldest, and John Jordan Bodine, of Hopewell, N. J., the youngest.

At three o'clock 22 men started their first quilt championship tournament. This year a silver loving cup was presented to the winning pitcher, Floyd Mariatt, of Langhorne, who retains the cup until '32 when it will again be competed for. John E. Tomlinson and Floyd Mariatt were the contestants of the finals, two games out of three to determine the winner. Had it been points instead of games the cup would have gone to Woodside, as the score was:

	Mariatt	Tomlinson
1st Game	25	24
2nd Game	7	25
3rd Game	25	10

There were various contests for the kiddies, fat ladies and in-betweens; the most enjoyable probably being the balloon breaking contest and peanut scramble. A very enjoyable afternoon finished with a delicious supper and an evening of card playing, makes a year seem a very long time to wait for the next reunion, which will be held at Samuel and Ella Tomlinson's on Newtown and Yardley Pike on Aug. 29th, 1932.

FERGUSONVILLE

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Fire Co. No. 1, Fergusonville, will hold a peach social at the fire headquarters Sunday September 4th. Tickets will be on sale. All are welcome.

The councilor of the Junior Garden Club takes this opportunity to thank the following members of the club for their gifts of flowers to be sent to the "Flowers for the Flowerless" during this summer: Bernice and Naomi Pickard, Florence and Barbara Ingraham, Ethel Mellor, Helen and Emma Campbell, Jean and Lois Stahl, Virginia Cassidy.

The many friends of Mrs. Backhouse, Sr., extend sincere wishes for a speedy recovery. Mrs. John Drudge had as her guests over the week-end her nephew and sister, Mrs. Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. Walker and niece, Miss Armstrong, of Chester.

2.—It is unlawful for the driver of any vehicle other than one on official business to follow any fire apparatus answering an alarm closer than 500 feet, or to park within 500 feet where fire apparatus has stopped in answer to a fire alarm.

3.—No vehicle or street car shall be driven over any unprotected fire hose laid down on the highway or street car track unless permission to do so is granted by the fire department or police officers in command.

Firemen frequently are hampered in their work by the presence of motor vehicles congesting the vicinity of the blaze. It is well for motorists to remember that violation of the rules here described carries a penalty of $10 fine or not more than five days in jail, in default.

SPORTS

CROYDON LOSES GAME BY ONE-RUN MARGIN

Croydon lost a close game Sunday evening by the score of 7 to 6 in seven innings—called on account of darkness.

Klady A. A. cancelled their game with Croydon two hours before game time and through an error by the booking agency, Ferga F. C. didn't show up until 5:30.

Manager Benneman managed to assemble five of the regulars and was helped out by Gleason, Baker, Hamm, Styles and Bock, and played Tioga A. C.

The two hours' delay showed up on the regulars and the pitching arm of Wilson Holland. Nevertheless he had 7 strikeouts and allowed eight hits.

Three errors in the third inning with two out gave Tioga four earned runs which stopped Holland's winning streak after eight straight. Hits by Forrest and Styles in the first sent in three runs for Croydon, Fenders drove two runs across in the fourth.

Baker's hit in the seventh drove Bock across with the final run for Croydon as darkness halted the game.

Next Sunday Croydon will play Summerdale, Pa.

Growing Too Fast?

By HARDIN BURNLEY

TENNIS vies with golf and the latter with speedboat racing this week as the court game's national singles championship is played at Forest Hills, L. I., the National Golf Amateur is on at the Beverly Country Club, Chicago, and Don Kaye piloting Miss England II will try to make Gar Wood in his latest Miss America breathe the propeller and exhaust spray on the Detroit River.

Polo—the polo—also pops into the sports scene with the United States and a Hurlingham team from the Argentine riding hell bent for leather on the Meadowbrook Club field at Westbury, L. I.

There'll be many stars in these varied competitions—ranging from the kinetic Kaye, who would clip even Mercury's wings, to Dan Kearny of Celtic name and rich Spanish blood who may prove the new sensation of the polo set. But none will attract more attention probably than—

Nineteen-year-old H. (standing for Henry) Ellsworth Vines, generally rated the most promising of known young tennis wonders. If stomach trouble (due some say to "growing pains") does not beset this 6-foot-2, 160-pound youth, he may win the National this week. Last year, he breezed through the Seabright event until he folded before "Sid" Wood in the final. This year Vines conquered John Hope Doeg on two occasions (including the Seabright) but since then he had to default in a title play at Meadowbrook because of upset "tummy" and so his stamina, at present, is questioned. The combination of tallness, light weight, and youth is difficult to adjust to concert pitch in championship play.

Vines is to meet defending Champion Doeg and practically all the rest of the world's best amateur racket brilliants in the Nationals. He'd be a pronounced favorite to win if not for that "growing pains" detail. For already this latest of court comets from California is being hailed as the national heir to the glory that was "Red" McLaughlin's a couple of decades ago!

Remember "Red"? Next to Tilden's, his is the most glamorous name and fame in American tennis.

Wives Tell Court of Treatment Accorded Them

main with his mother on the grounds that she had at one time "ordered her off the place."

It was testified that the child's present home surroundings were not agreeable for a child who is in the sixth grade. Mr. Applebach testified that her grandfather, Mr. Dickert, drank and that the child was constantly on the streets.

Judge Keller, who directed Applebach to pay the costs, refused to make an order at this time, because he stated that the defendant had no money and apparently was not able to get any work, and had shown a willingness to aid the support of his own child.

A quarrel over his wife's cigarette smoking in bed, her attentions to other men and her hurling of lunch pails, dishes and other household furnishings resulted in the charges of cruel and barbarous treatment against Roy Bauder, Spriggeld township, preferred by his wife, Ruby Bauder.

The Bauders were married on July 18, 1929, and immediately following their marriage lived at Coopersburg, at the home of his parents.

Mrs. Bauder testified how her husband drank, would not support her, pushed her out of the car and struck her at various times, while he testified that she threw lunch pails at him and at one time knocked four teeth out.

A brother of the defendant testified that he has seen his sister-in-law travel around with other men. Mr. and Mrs. Victor Rice, who were neighbors of the Bauders while they were residents of Centre Valley, testified they heard fighting and cursing and saw dishes and household utensils hurled through the windows. The Court placed the costs on the county and dismissed the case.

Irwin Fetterolf, of Doylestown, was directed to appear at the next term of court by Judge Calvin S. Boyer after he had pleaded guilty to the charge of non-support and desertion, which were preferred by his wife, Evelyn Fetterolf.
